Classes: Mondays and Wednesdays to 15.30hs to 17.30hs

Office hours: By appointment (email me).

Dates: January 13th to March 26th.

The class will be in English, but you should feel free to participate/present in Portuguese if you feel more comfortable doing so.

Course Goal: This course will cover non-market interactions between agents such as politicians, voters, bureaucrats, warlords, etc. We will cover topics in the frontier of political economy research. Most papers will be empirical (some structural, most reduced form) but we will go over applied theory when necessary. The goal is for you to produce your own research in political economy.

- 60% final project and presentation: It consists of a paper proposal and a short presentation about it. It should be around 10 pages long, and include either preliminary results or a detailed plan for the potential paper. Abstract due: February 21st. Presentation dates: March 24th, 26th. Deadline for written proposal: April 11th.
- 20% class presentation: Presentation and discussion of a paper (there will be a sign up sheet). Presentation dates: March 10th, 12th.
- 20% class participation: The class will combine lecture and seminar (discussion with students). There will be one or two required papers per class.

Readings: You are not supposed to read all these papers, I will assign the papers the week before. The rest are optional in case you want to delve deeper into a specific topic.
